The Melody Man

*There was a man who loved to play.
His instruments brightened every day.
Birds joined in with tunes so sweet,
Their songs and his in harmony meet.
He soared with joy, so high, so free,
Floating in the sky's melody.
But joy gave way to growing doubt,
As fear and worry wandered about.
He stood one day before the crowd,
His voice sincere, his heart unbowed.
A song he sang with all his might,
But silence fell—no cheers, no light.
The judgment came, cold and unclear,
It broke his heart and fed his fear.
Tears welled up, he cried aloud,
“I failed,” he said, “I’ve lost my sound.”
Yet deep within, a whisper came,
“You love your song, you played the game.
You crossed the bay, you chased the tune,
Don’t lose hope—it’s not too soon.”*
